(click on link to see all the artisans and the map of studio locations)

Friday, Saturday, Sunday

10 - 5 p.m.

December 2, 3 and 4

and

December 9, 10 and 11

This is a hand-colored lithograph I created recently...the glory of fall and now we look to the stillness of winter.

Hope you can join us for the Holiday Tour. I've invited some guest artists so you will have a variety of high quality items to choose from.

GUEST ARTISTS:

William N. Price

Nicholson Woodworks

<http://nicholsonwoodworks.com/>

In order to maintain my sanity, I make sawdust.

In the process I occasionally turn out a piece of furniture and a lot of bowls.

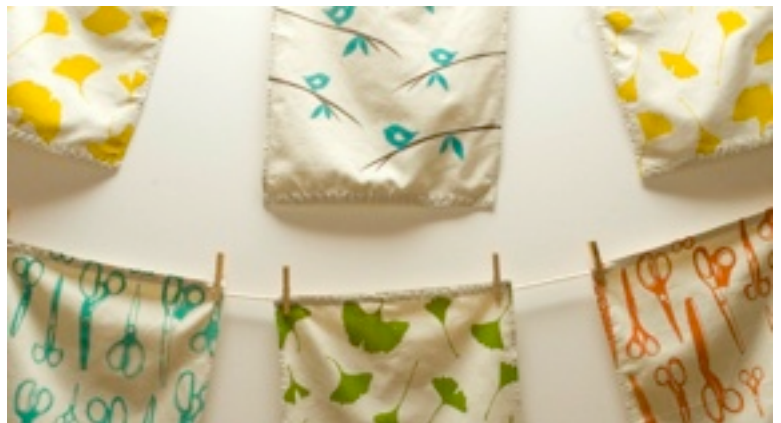

Almost all of the wood I use is from storm damage. The website has a picture of a large burl that blew down during a storm in Poolesville.

All of the bowls have a food safe finish and I hope they will be used for years and years.

New and exciting accessories and handprinted home fabric goods are here, all the way from Portland, OR. Read the recent article about her business and there's also a link to Queen Bee if you want to order straight from her website. http://www.neighborhoodnotes.com/news/2011/11/movers_and_makers_rebecca_percy_queen_bee_creations/

Annette Abrams

Annette shares her poetry and art to help cancer patients and their caregivers. In this verse story a young cancer patient visualizes what is happening in her body and enlists a circle of helper heroes to join in her effort to regain her health. Annette created many of the illustrations for My Body Needs Help during her treatment at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). A book of hope for readers of all ages.

If you can't make it to the Holiday Tour, here is the info you need to purchase Annette's book: ISBN 978-0-9773536-6-8 List: $15/Tenley Circle Press Price: $11.50

Diane Teigiser

Handmade books from Tiger Lily Creations, including beautiful accordion books and one-of-a-kind recycled/up-cycled journals. Each one is handmade with heart, especially for you -- and makes a perfect gift for someone special!

Mike Shaffer

House shapes are everywhere. When children learn to draw they are inevitably attracted to houses—simple boxes usually with an angled roof and maybe a window or door. I continue to be surprised at how frequently houses appear in artistic imagery throughout history and how much fundamental house-like configurations influence artists working today.

Each of the House Works is a small sculpture, numbered and signed by the artist. The works are not models but incorporate house-related features like roof shapes and doors into their simple forms. They are made from reclaimed or recycled wood. "I learned respect for renovation and the reuse of materials from my father early in life," Shaffer says.
